Description of Workcamp:

Background: Jeju Island is a volcanic island, dominated by Halla-san (Halla Mountain), a volcano, 1,950 metres high that is the highest mountain in South Korea.

The island was created entirely as a result of volcanic eruptions that took place approximately 2 million years ago, from the Tertiary period to the beginning of the Quaternary period during the Cenozoic Era. The island consists chiefly of basalt and lava. It has a humid subtropical climate, warmer than that of the rest of Korea, with four distinct seasons.

The value of Jeju Island has been recognized through its designation as a Biosphere Reserve in 2002, as a World Natural Heritage site in 2007 and as a Global Geopark in 2010, making this sub-tropical island the only place on earth to receive all three UNESCO designations in natural sciences.

The Island's temperate climate, natural scenery, and beaches make it a popular tourist destination for South Koreans as well as visitors from other parts of East Asia.

Because of the relatively isolated geographical state of the island, the people of Jeju have developed a culture and language that are distinct from those of mainland Korea. Jeju has a matriarchal family structure and a tradition of worshipping a female goddess which is quite rare in the other parts of Korea. The Jeju Chilmoeridang Youngdeung Gut (Shamanistic ritual) which is held in the second lunar month to pray to Grandmother Youngdeung for calm seas, an abundant harvest and a plentiful sea catch, was inscribed on UNESCO's Representative List of the Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity in 2009.

Local Host Organization: Oe-moeng-a-bang-jan-chi-ma-eul is a small seaside community in the foothills of Halla Mountain, which is a UNESCO World Natural Heritage site. Since this is a remote area away from the major tourist destinations, the village is still well preserved and maintains the traditional life style of Jeju Island. However, the village faces issues relating to the decline in its number of residents.

In order to deal with the challenge it faces, this community has been developing education programmes for children from the cities, encouraging them to stay at the village and study with local children during the school semester. The village also runs a programme for people to stay in the village and experience the traditions and culture of Jeju Island. For more information please visit www.jeju.go2vil.org (Korean only)

This workcamp is financially supported by the Jeju local government.

Type of Work: Volunteers will construct stone walls traditional to Jeju, using the island's basalt stone, to protect houses and trees against the strong winds from the sea. Basalt stone walls are one of the representative cultural icons of Jeju Island, though their popularity has declined in the area due to introduction of new modern construction materials. Volunteers will also do work for local residents such as repairing old houses and painting the common facilities of the community. Volunteers will also organize an afternoon school class for local children in which they will have time to present their countries and the World Natural Heritage sites found in their own country.

Culture programme: Volunteers will climb Halla Mountain, World Natural Heritage site and learn about the values and characteristics of Jeju Island. They will also have time to experience local culture.

Accommodation and Food: Volunteers will stay at the training centre for youth which is a renovated elementary school located in the middle of a small community in the foothills of Halla Mountain. Volunteers will share big rooms with other volunteers of their gender. The centre is equipped with conference rooms, a kitchen and a big courtyard. Volunteers will take turns to prepare the group's meals.

Number of volunteers: 20 (international 10 / local 10)

Requirements: Volunteers are required to do manual work and organize educational programmes for local children. Each volunteer is also required to bring materials, such as traditional costumes, to introduce their own country.
